Denying ourselves is a sometimes tricky business:

① What can denying yourself look like when it is not actually denying yourself (but is intended to look like it is.)

② What is denying yourself, for real? Give three examples.

③ Christians deny themselves personally, and intimately. Do Christians deny themselves corporately? What does that look like?

④ The recent execution of Coptic Christians in Egypt could serve as an example of denying ones self even to death. How do we who are alive follow that example in light of their loss?
